Invention in Frost

In such, the simpler things, we check. That kiss, under creaking trees.

From houses jack-o-lantern lit the speeches of our others outwreathing in a cone.

  Shadows harrowing the stones, we dream ourselves in breath.